Robin:

I have noted in your last two pieces of correspondence to Ray that you are classifying such. The decision as to whether information is or is not classified rests with you; however, it is my impression that the technical concept and the work which we are performing is in itself unclassified. As is always the case, the relationship of our organization is classified.

I would appreciate it if you would review future correspondence from a classification viewpoint in order that the amount of actual classified data we receive is limited. This will assist us in minimizing the problems of segregating and controlling information.

Your assistance in this area will be greatly appreciated.
